

Beware of reduced light

Top tips for keeping safe at this time of year

With the clocks set to go back on Sunday 29th October, drivers and other road users need to be especially aware of the risks associated with reduced light and low sun.

There is every likelihood that as a result of the clocks 'falling back' drivers will spend more time driving in low sun, resulting in an increased risk of dazzling, as the angle of the sun can be too low for a visor.
